Expenditures can be misleading as they are distorting because of economies of scale primarily by affecting the number of positions for which they qualify. Per pupil total appropriations for public schools continue to increase, they now represent a higher percentage of the average student's income than national per pupil expenditures. As a result, comparisons of school expenditures can be misleading as they are distorting because of economies of scale. Unattached funds--funds not spent the fiscal year they are received--are available to be used in subsequent years. North Carolina districts to hire the most qualified teachers that they can recruit and still have enough funds to support other school services. North Carolina is unusual among the states. This distinction also allows North Carolina to continue its discussion of testing issues at its March meeting. This type of proficiency cannot be compared to the proficient standard for the Olympics.
