Dr. Mary McDuffie, executive director of the North Carolina Center for the Advancement of Teaching, told Board members that this is the 20th Anniversary for the 20-Year Celebration of North Carolina Center for the Advancement of Teaching. Good News

McDuffie said that the week-long professional development program is designed to provide teachers with new tools and standards. Following a review of other states' activities in this area (e.g., the California School Reform Initiative, the need to prepare students and teachers, instructional delivery, and accountability initiatives), the Board moved forward with the question of next steps at a subsequent Board meeting. State Board members received a report detailing how these tools and strategies can be aligned with the state's Standard Course of Study. These schools also have the advantage of being aligned with the state's Standard Course of Study. These schools also have the advantage of being aligned with the state's Standard Course of Study.

Additionally, changes in titles for Alternate Assessments also have been considered. Board members approved revisions to the Accountability Workbook resulting from a June 2005 Title I implementation report. The Accountability Workbook is a comprehensive document that outlines the requirements for state and local educational agencies to meet the goals of the No Child Left Behind Act. The SBE approved new cut scores for K-12 assessments to reflect current guidelines related to accountability, testing and student performance.

Also approved was the establishment of an Appeals Panel. This panel will ensure that any decisions made by the Board are fair and impartial. The SBE also approved revisions to the Allotment Policy Manual. This manual outlines the procedures for distributing funds to local school systems.
